The announcement that it strike has ended is welcomed by the public who since last Thursday morning have been either forced to wall or resort to the litney.

The settlement was largely brought about through the efforts of Dr. James of Dinnehus who has been the means of bringing the two factions together. Dr. Donohus extended all the conferences, upon invitation; and volunteered valuable service as mediator which service has been greatly appreciated by the trolley company and the employes.

When questioned in regard to the matter Thesday night P. J. O'Brien, the international representative who has had charge of the strike situation in this city since the trouble started last week, expressed satisfaction that a settlement has been reached. Asked as to whether the company had granted recognition of the union he said that the company would operate under the open shop rule but that the company had agreed to meet the employes and their properly accredited representative whenever difference of opinion arose between the employes and the company.

The New Wage Scale. The agreement signed on Tuesday carries with it the following wage

The maximum which the men were receiving before the strike was 38 cents per hour. The original demand of the strikers was for 35 cents, time and a half for overtime, a nine hour day and meal tickets. As a counter proposition the company offered a maximum of 32 cents an hour. The offer was refused and the strike started.

The local trolleymen were jubitant when the settlement was officially announced on Tuesday. Since Monday afternoon there had been rumors of a settlement but no permanent agreement was reached until Tuesday afternoon.

Various Locals Took Vote.

The proposition signed Tuesday was made to the men by the Shore Line on Monday. With this end in view, Representative O'Brien made a trip around to the various locals Monday night to get their action on the proposition. He went to Saybrook, New London, Westerly and other points on the system where the locals are located and then returned to Norwich, when live matter was presented to the local men. It had been planned to hold a meeting of the local trolleymen at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, but as Mr. O'Brien did not reach Norwich until long after the hour set for the meeting, the meeting could not be held until leter in the morning. Gameral Satisfaction Over Sattlement.

The general public, the marchants and both factions expressed satisfaction that the settlement had been reached in so short a time. At the beginning it looked as though the difficulty was to be a long drawn out affair and the striking trolleymen were preparing for a month or two of waiting. This lack of regular trolley service, especially on the suburban lines, kept many people away from the city and the merchants have suffered greatly.
